

Dr Caroline Lucas (Green Party) ME

"Greens think that fairness and equality should be at the heart of our society, across everything from decent pensions and secure jobs to fair trade and tackling climate change. Listening to and working with people of all faiths and none, I know that fairness and equality are important to them too - and that's where engaging with the political process comes in. Not only is it a positive way to try and shape the kind of society we all live in, how individuals vote can help determine whether priorities like overcoming poverty, protecting human rights or promoting peace, for example, get a look in."
